you have rights

Charter of Rights for children & young people in Out of Home Care in the ACT
You have the right to be safe and looked after

You have the right to be respected

You have the right to be treated fairly
You have the right to have fun, play and be healthy

You have the right to be heard

You have the right to privacy and have your own things
You have the right to ask questions about what is happening to you.

You have the right to have contact with the people you care about and know about your family and cultural history.

You have the right to go to school.

You have the right to talk to people about things you don't like or don't understand.
This Charter of Rights has been especially written for children and young people who are unable to live with their parents and who are living in short or long-term Out of Home Care in the ACT.

You may be living with someone from your family, or with another family in foster care — or with other children or young people in residential care.

Why is the Charter of Rights important?

The Charter of Rights sets out what you can expect from the people who are looking after you and work with you, when you are in care. All of these people have to make sure that the things they do for you — and allow you to do — respect your rights.

If you want help to fix a problem, or if you want someone to act on your behalf, there are lots of people you can talk to.
